By using the bch.co.uk website you agree to our use of cookies as described in our cookie policy
Cookie Policy I Understand
We use cookies to track usage and preferences.
I Understand

Blackpool Coastal Housing

Search

Choose another section

- Home
- Customers
- Report ASB
- Contact Us
- What is anti-social behaviour?
- Help Us to Help You
- Our Partner Agencies

What is Anti-Social Behaviour?

Last Modified June 13, 2017

Share this page

Anti-Social Behaviour (ASB) can be anything from low-level persistent nuisance to serious violent behaviour. It includes all behaviour that harms or has a negative effect on residents' quality of life in and around their homes, such as:

- Drunkenness and rowdy behaviour
- Public drug dealing
- Intimidating groups ‘taking over’ public spaces
- Noisy neighbours
- Loud music or televisions
- Refusing to silence dogs that bark non-stop
- Threats, intimidation and harassment
- Vandalism, graffiti, spray-painting or damaging private property
- Fly tipping and litter
- People dumping rubbish and abandoning cars
- The misuse of fireworks
- People who don’t clean up after their dogs

If the anti-social behaviour you are experiencing is severe or urgent - you should also speak to your local Police for further advice and information. Visit the Lancashire Police website here for details of your nearest station/officer.

Back to top